FOREWORD

THE Class of 1917 offers this, their INDEX, to all who may be interested. We hope that the "interested" may include alumni, undergraduates, M. A. C. men-to-be, and friends. It is only the duty of the Class to prepare and publish this work as an epitome of the past year and as a bond which shall help to connect our lives in years to come with the memories of the days that have gone. But there is a greater and more important mission that we feel should be accomplished—the establishment of some tangible power which will serve to instill into the spirits of Aggie men that fore-runner of fellowship—Friendship.

With this view in mind, we respectfully submit our INDEX.

THE BOARD OF EDITORS.

To
Ernest Anderson

WE RESPECTFULLY DEDICATE THIS BOOK, IN TOKEN OF OUR REGARD FOR HIM AS A FRIEND AND
IN TESTIMONY OF OUR ADMIRATION
FOR HIM AS A MAN AND A STUDENT

Ernest Anderson.

Ernest Anderson

HE subject of this sketch was born near Kaufman, Texas. He lived on a farm until twenty years of age, attended the public schools, entered a small college—Trinity University—and received from it the degree of A. B., taking highest honors. He then entered the University of Texas, intending to specialize in biology but devoted the major part of his time to botany and chemistry. During his course at that institution he made Phi Beta Kappa, and in 1903, received the degree of B. Sc. The two following years he was a fellow in botany and chemistry and received the degree of M. Sc. During the year 1905-6 he taught chemistry and physics in the Corsicana high school. As early as 1901 he began taking courses at the University of Chicago during its summer quarter, and he continued this work until he entered the University as a graduate student and fellow in the autumn of 1906. In the spring of 1907 he was made associate in chemistry and in 1909 received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy magna cum laude, the subject of his thesis being, "The Action of Fehling's Solution on Galactose."

While a graduate student at Chicago he pursued his studies in physical chemistry with Professors McCoy and Stieglitz, and in quantitative analysis and organic chemistry with Professors Stieglitz and Nef. In the spring of 1909 he passed the United States Civil Service examination and was offered and declined a position in the Bureau of Standards. He was also elected to membership in the Sigma Xi fraternity.

After receiving his doctor's degree he became special research assistant to Professor Nef, the head of the department of chemistry and continued in this position until his call to M. A. C. He was offered the position of instructor in chemistry in case he decided to remain at the University. In addition to his doctor's thesis, he published, while at Chicago, two scientific papers entitled, "The Relation between Configuration and Rotation of the Lactones in the Sugar and Saccharinic Acid Groups," and "An Empirical Relation between the Configuration and Rotation of Sugars."

In the summer of 1912, Dr. Anderson was called to M. A. C. as assistant professor of general and physical chemistry and in 1914 he was made associate professor. During his three years of residence he has received a call to an instructorship in organic chemistry at Harvard University, and another call to become head of the scientific division of the Margaret Morrison School of Science at the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Only recently he was approached by the president and dean of the University of Utah with a view to securing him as head of the chemical department of that institution.

Professor Anderson has published several scientific papers while at M. A. C. and three men—Messrs. Noyes, Bogue and Brown—have made the degree of Master of Science under his direction.

Since coming to Amherst, he has co-operated with Professor Peters in reorganizing the work in freshman chemistry. He has also enlarged and strengthened the course in qualitative analysis so that it is now considered fully equal to that given in any college. A course in physical chemistry has been introduced by him and is required of all men majoring in chemistry.

Professor Anderson is an excellent teacher and full of energy and enthusiasm for his subject. He inspires and leads rather than commands the student. He is cordial in his relations with both faculty and students; the latter regard him as their friend and advisor as well as their superior. While he is always ready to help any one to a better understanding of his subject, he has little patience with the drone.

He seems to care little for formal social functions; the atmosphere of the library and laboratory is evidently preferred to that of the drawing-room. Even administrative duties and committee meetings seem irksome and as so much time lost from more important work. While somewhat reserved and not inclined to take the first step in making acquaintances, the ice once broken, one finds beneath the apparent shyness the true democratic spirit.

Professor Anderson is not only a teacher but he possesses also the true spirit of research which is bound to prove decidedly helpful to the department of chemistry and to the entire institution. His mind is ever busy with some problem requiring solution, and he communicates this spirit to his associates and students. Professor Nef of Chicago, in his letter of recommendation, said of him, "He is a young man of tremendous capacity for work and is brimful of enthusiasm for research." "I can, therefore, recommend him to you as a very, very unusual and exceptionally well qualified teacher and research man". Let us hope that he can be retained at M. A. C.

CLASS OF 1916

Senior Class History

“ERE we are once more”—so sayeth the circus man. Since arriving on the Mass. Aggie circus grounds, we have spent two years visiting the side-shows, fakirs, and scholastic prestidigitators.

We have seen isometric carbon atoms turn handsprings, and the halogen family maintaining its chemical equilibrium in an atmosphere of ozone. We were next regaled by a fictitious demonstration of the value of trained specimens of lumbricus terrestris in agriculture, a feature that might have been established, but for the fact that nearby the Czar was impaling one of said animals on his famous fishing tackle, of which sophs were even eager to swallow “hook, bob, and sinker.” Our visit to the side-shows was concluded after listening to 7500 reasons why there should be another Democrat in Congress.

Wearying of the minor attractions, we were eager to enter the main tent of our Senior and Junior years. Various “major” attractions caused us to separate, but we all gradually clustered about the main ring where a Prom was being held, a function at which the fairest was none too good for the fair. In another ring, a number of clowns were in an historic pageant, commemorating the spirited custom of tree planting. The president acted as master of ceremonies, creating an enthusiasm in which all joined. It would be against “sound farm practice” and the principles of agriculture if the tree did not thrive after such an inauguration.

Everybody up now for the grand finale. Knowing that we must move on, we mingle pleasure with regret—pleasure in the knowledge that we are to jump out into life with a definite purpose, and regret because to say good-bye to the scenes and associations we have loved is no easy matter. So as we pass out of the college circle, and though we may become widely separated, may we still retain the common tie which binds us to Old Aggie, whose name is dear to us all. And when the good call is sent out, may 1916 be sure to “Be There.”

CLASS OF 1917

Junior Class History

HE Class of Nineteen Seventeen had the distinction of having the largest class to enter M. A. C. up to the fall of 1913, there having been two hundred and two members when we were freshmen.

Sixteen was on her job from the start, and most of us remember "Woe is me—I am a poor freshman". Has anyone forgotten our efforts to get a picture? Of course we got "stung" at the rope pull practice, and we marched down town to the tune of "How Green I Am", as all good freshmen had done before us.

Some of our members did entertain at pond parties, but Sixteen did not have the satisfaction of pulling us thru the pond, though they did get three feet of rope.

The sophs must have underestimated our ability and class spirit, when Pickard won for '17 the privilege of smoking on the campus. Was there a single '17 man that did not smoke? If so, I do not know him.

We rather "slipped it over" on '16 again when we chose our officers, and we kept them "a-guessing" throughout the banquet season. It was due to the utmost vigilance on the part of each member of their class, that they won from us the decision, but in so far as the rivalry brought the members of our class to a better understanding of each other and instilled a determination to "stick" together, it was a decided benefit.

Our plans for the discipline of 1918, were radically modified, but by watchfulness, we did succeed in treating some members of that class to a bath. We also found out how well sixty of them could swim on the first Friday afternoon of the college year! None of the usual customs were omitted, and we prevented 1918 from smoking on the campus until late in the year.

When it came to the freshman banquet, 1918 certainly did know their rules, and they made use of every advantage given them.

1917 has not been backward in supplying men for the various student activities. We had three men play at some time during the varsity football season of 1914. We have had men on the track team, and on the rifle team. The class has among its members, more than one orator and debator, and many of our men are active in the Dramatic Club. When you speak of hockey, we are there again, and some of our men have played varsity baseball. In inter-class events, we have seldom come out last, and whether we are winning or losing, you will find we have the odd-class spirit.

This man must have been born under a lucky star all right, for even the combined efforts of Billy and Doc Gordon couldn't drive him from our midst. "Babby" has learned the fine art of getting the maximum of credit for the minimum of work. Worry was left out when he was made and it is safe to say that he will always be happy as long as the supply of Prince Albert holds out. His chief delight in the future will be as he says, "To render service to humanity by systematic investigation of the living conditions of the more dangerous bacteria."

He's an optimistic, pessimistic, disbelieving believer, and as such his real attitude is hard to make out. The only things definitely known about him are that after scraping putty for four hours in the hot sun on top of the plant house one afternoon he announced that the course was really practical and not all theory, and secondly, that he has a strong yearning for the gay life of Boston. As a class embassy, Bert is 100% perfect having at one time succeeded in seducing 50 pair of "bracelets" from the guardianship of Boston's law enforcers. What inducements he offered we don't know but the "cuffs" made some collection.

As night telegraph operator in Hamp. or Amherst, Os makes a noise like Marconi in disguise and in such a capacity he has travelled over much of the known (and some of the unknown) world. When in a reminiscent mood he likes to reflect on that song "There's a Girl in Savanah, etc." If you don't recognize him any other way you can always tell him when you hear the call "Hey Bert, roll me a cigarette."

And he has beautiful legs. We know, because his running pants are awfully short. Alfred's favorite amusement when training, is to run out for a late-afternoon-gallop before the admiring gaze of Informal guests.

Dick's ever-evident smile and his never-failing loyalty to Seventeen have combined effectively to make him one of the most popular fellows in the class. His most notable performances have been in connection with discus-hurling, in which art he now holds the college record. The only time Dick worries is when the Springfield mail is delayed, for that is where his interest lies when it is not on college affairs.

Question for the Sphinx: What will Bobby be doing next? At football he is a shining light, at baseball he is the same, and in between he takes up any spare time with boxing, having mastered all the fine points in his "younger days". As a leader of a "rough neck squad" he made his reputation last banquet season and claims to be able to uphold it. His latest acquisition is a 30-footer on which he spends his vacations out on the "rolling deep" fishing, gunning and attempting to make some money, and succeeding in keeping in trim for athletics.

Grafton—that is where he comes from, and there certainly was some graft on when he grew up so small. Though so small and quiet, nevertheless when he goes “over the river” to a bacon bat, he drops the meek expression and then—oh my— . At any rate, he can find the peaches—he was raised on them. One of the sights of the campus is to see “Wes” riding his sword around the parade ground while showing the freshmen the art of preparedness.

This, my friends, is the young gentleman of whom, were it not for his face and feet, it could not be told whether he was coming or going. This happens to be very beneficial in his case, however, as Dave is the official guardian of our net and opposing players are often very much worried by the fact that he has a habit of always being in the way. His accomplishments are notable as he has been known to make faces through a cornet and has even draped himself over the Hop Committee. Although hampered by the fact that he comes from Arlington, Dave at times exhibits streaks of rare intelligence as Dr. Cancee will testify.

At last we have found the leader of the notorious Black Cross gang, which has so long terrorized the peaceful environs of lower Lincoln Avenue. His calm and peaceful bearing among us for the last two years left him unsuspected until he was recently apprehended while attempting to recruit volunteers for service under Carranza in Mexico. This news came as a great shock to the Index reporter. His fears were soon set aside, however, when Walter informed him that the recruits were to take part in a new movie drama entitled "A Nation in Shreds", with W. I. as chief mediator. The Mayor of Hatfield shuffled into this quiet hamlet about the 9th of September, 1913. He yawned, blinked his eyes, and decided that this was a pretty good place to stay, so he took a suite at the Brooks' Apartments, and proceeded through the labyrinth of freshman year. The Mayor of Hatfield returned about the 9th. of September, 1914. Again he yawned and blinked and decided this was still a good place to stay, but he moved to more exclusive apartments in South. The Mayor of Hatfield re-turned about September 15, 1915. He still held the same decision, but his pride had broken—he moved into East Entry. Nuff ced.

Another one of that crowd of Dorchester rough-housers is our Harold. Although a quiet looking chap at first, he quickly grows to resemble a German torpedo in action. His chief occupations are running after the chickens (literally of course), playing pool, and going to the mail on Tuesday evening. In the summer he spends his time putting his fingers under a hammer and calling himself a carpenter. Outside of that, though, he is fairly human even if he did get 99 in Physics Lab.

It is doubtful if "Nails" ever looked at a doughnut; he always sees the hole. We cannot say whether this pessimism is natural or comes from long association with the hard characters whose faces you see on these pages. However that may be, he has redeemed himself with his camera, for a more persistent snapshotter the college never saw. One glance through his photo collection tells the whole story of the ups and downs of 1917. That name "Nails" is supposed to convey the impression of "hard guy" or some similar title of approbation. It must have originated with some one who knew him in his home town; he never impressed us that way.

To what depths we might have sunk without his ennobling influence no one can tell. But we'll all admit that his cheerful countenance can drive away the blues and make the old "coll" seem like home. Lest the dear reader be too much misled, we add that he was seen to weep bitter tears when the old Empire at Holyoke burned down. There is a rumor about that he has political aspirations. CLASS OF 1918

1918—A Pepic Epic

Should you ask me, whence these Sophomores,
Whence these men of might and prowess,
With their wondrous swelling muscles
And their mien of higher wisdom. . . .
I should answer, I should tell you,
They are from the beetling Berkshires
Where the wildcat stalks the woodchuck,
They are from the far Nantucket
Where the herring flees the codfish,
Every seat of glory sends them,
And they come with flaunt and flourish.

It was in the early autumn,
In the harvest moon, September,
That our warriors first assembled
On the hunting grounds of Aggie.
Our estate was mean and lowly,
For we were but humble Freshmen
And we suffered many buffets,
Knocked about by cruel Fortune,
Swatted lustily with paddles,
Doused and soused in fetid water.
Oftentimes we heard the warwhoop,
"Show some Pep, you bloody Freshmen!"
And we harkened to the warwhoop,
Showed our Pep in scrappy struggles,
And ere long our foes were vanquished,
Vanquished, scalped, and drawn and quartered.
Thus we strove for education.

In the spring we held a banquet,
Such a banquet! Such a banquet!
Enemies essayed to thwart us
But we foiled them and outfought them,
Such a banquet! Such a banquet!
Nevermore will it be equalled.
Where were we in athletics,
In the games of skill and muscle?
We were there in athletics!
In basketball our mighty warriors
Elbowed onward to the championship,
And the last sun of the season
Saw us crush our foes in baseball.
Thus progressed our education. . . .

Moons passed, and once more at Aggie
We assembled for the slaughter,
Breathing fire and vowing vengeance,
Frightening Freshies into frenzies,
Playing all the pleasant humbugs,
All the tricks and hocus-pocus,
That we learned when we were Freshmen. . . .
Victory perches on our shoulders,
Glory clothes us and enshrouds us,
Aureoles of pride enwreathes us,
Truly, we are wondrous warriors,
And we're getting———educated!
Yes, we're getting educated.

Freshman Class History

Amherst, Mass.,
December ten 1915.

Dere Maw:

i am orful sorry thet i couldn't rite befour but I hed to give thet feller in the treasure orfic so much cash thet i didn't hev enough to buy a postij stamp even. I hev jest got the tew cents together. pleze inclose a stamp when you rite me if yer want an anser. Them new cow hide boots of paws thet he'd worn only tew yeres got all wore out same as my pocket book, sence i hed to stand in line so long to git registrared and treasurared and deaned. Pleze send me them old sneakers thet I hed come three yeres last summer. stick a piece of cardboard on ter the whole in the bottom, an i guess they'll dew alright.

Say, Maw, but yer oughter a scene thet rope pull. One class or the other hes ter hev a bath once a year jest fer the sake of keeping clene i surpose. They took and guv us fellers the bath this yere, but i don't think we was half es dirty as some of them softomores. They're cleneing out the pond now, but i don't surpose there is any conektion between the wash we got and the kondition of the bottom of thet pond. one nite the Softs gut as all out in our perjamers to parade down to Amherst and make speeches and things. I put on thet pear of red and grene striped ones thet uncle Tom left me when he defunked. the Softs thought they was a good target and paddled me purty hard. The pants part got ripped orful. we busted up there old parade howsomever. they caught a few of us, but the most of us jest simply left our perjamers behind and beat it.

We wanted ter get our pictures took but the Softs didn't think the cameras we hed were good enuf and so bruk them all up. They sat up all nite, too, jest ter keep us from getting together and getting it took. We was all in shelter, but them poor coots was out in the kold, except fer three of there feller conspirators thet we hed kapchured and kept with us. We didn't get a picture, but we didn't get froze, nuther.

Say, Maw, but we hev got some ball teme in our klass. We almost bete the softs the first time and the second they won what I call an eleventh hour victory, we was a going ter stop at eleven o'clock and, rite in the middle of an inning, with two of our teme on base, the clock struck. The softs ran rite away from there, jest as if they thought something was after them. i'm playing rite guard on the football teme, but i don't know es the Softs will play us this yere sence we are a pretty husky crowd. in course they don't want ter get a beating. I take after paw in hevng a good thik hed, but it helps er lot in football.

With luv ter the hole fambly, including Mandy Green

I is,
WILLY.

HIGH SCHOOL DAY

The Origin and Development of the Freshman Banquet Season

The word "banquet" at once brings to our minds "big eats", good fellowship, and a general good time, and by putting the word "Freshman" before it we add to the meeting good-natured class rivalry, class spirit, and a firm basis on which to build the bigger and better spirit of the college.

The ancient Hebrews banqueted; the old Romans had their festive occasions; the Athenians ate their dainties to the sound of soft music; and even the American Indians feasted on the produce of a big killing after a successful hunt. It remained, however, for the Freshman classes at M. A. C. to combine all the qualities of different types into their one momentous banquet of the Freshman year.

Even in the very first classes of the college a Freshman class banquet was an accepted thing,—serving as a get-together and time for general good feeling. But just when class rivalry and Sophomore opposition started we cannot be sure of. We do know, however, that in the year 1881, when 1884 were Freshmen, they held a "feed" of some sort in the North room in North College which was somewhat demoralized by the advent of a quantity of pepper from above—poured thru holes in the ceiling from the attic by a few Sophomores. Whether this was concerted action on the part of the Sophomore class, or the work of a few of them bent on mischief, we do not know, but it began a little opposition which has since borne results.

From this time on the Freshmen continued to have their banquets, usually in the spring, with here and there a little spice to the occasions. Sometimes they were held in conjunction with the Juniors and sometimes by themselves under the name of "Freshman Night", nearly all the surrounding towns or cities being favored by one or more visits from the banqueting classes.

Along in the late 90's, however, and early 1900's we find class rivalry coming in strong during the Freshman banquet. On June 6, 1902, the class of '05 had their banquet at the Cooley House in Springfield and in the Signal of that year we find mention of a little disturbance caused by Sophomores during the banquet.

In 1903 the class of '06 showed up in strength and, after misleading the Sophomores by wide detours, almost the entire class gathered at the switch above the Hatch Experiment Station at midnight on May 18 and then went unmolested to South Deerfield where the banquet—or class breakfast as the Sophomores termed it—was held at the Bloody Brook House. The class returned to Amherst about 7.30 A. M. on May 19, much elated over their success, and much to the chagrin of the waiting "Sophs."

The next year the class of '07—"by evading our watchful enemy at noontide" went to Hartford, Conn., by trolley and there held their banquet at the New Dom Hotel on May 13, 1904.

Preferring a change in direction for their banquet, the class of '08 journeyed to North Adams and there, well out of reach of the mystified Sophomores, they enjoyed their banquet to the fullest extent.

Our "Freshman Banquet" or "Banquet Season" as we look upon it today does not have its official origin buried so far back in the college annals.

On the Senate Records for March 6, 1906, in the handwriting of Bartlett, Secretary of the Senate, we find the following:

"Voted—that in the future the Freshmen shall hold their class banquet during the first two weeks in May, only."

This action of the Senate seems to have caused a great deal of adverse criticism and serious discussion; so much so in fact that the following is later found in the Senate Records:

"March 22, 1906. Special meeting called to order by Pres. Peakes. Limitation of the Freshman banquet reconsidered and discussed. Suggested that we meet committee of the faculty and talk it over with them."

As a result of further discussion and conferences on the matter the records of the meeting of March 26, 1906, read as follows:

"Voted—that the Freshman class shall hold its banquet on or between April 20 and June 1 and that they shall not be molested outside of the town limits."

On May 4 of this year, just four months from the time Pres. Butterfield had been elected to the Presidency of the college, the Freshman succeeded in getting away for the first successful banquet under Senate rules.

Early Friday morning just at daybreak the class as a body started to walk to Hadley where they took a car for "Hamp" and then to Springfield. At the Hadley car barns the Sophs appeared just as the Freshman were ready to start. Descriptions of affairs when two classes get together are a little difficult but we have the word of the College Signal that the Sophs were not given a great deal of encouragement to enter the car and soon retired somewhat shaken and bruised.

Although this may have been the first banquet scrap Old Hadley ever saw, it was not destined to be the last one as later years have shown.

The Sophs, returning from their unsuccessful attempt to break up the Freshmen, found several of the latter straggling along the road toward Hadley and took them into custody but freed them in time to let them reach Springfield where the banquet was held at the Highland House at 8 o'clock with 52 members present.

In 1907, for some unexplained reason, the banquet rules fail to appear in the Senate Records so all we know about them is this, taken from the College Signal:

"The Senate has prepared concise and definite rulings on the matter of the Freshman banquet—rulings which no one can misinterpret, which will nullify all previous precedents and establish a wise and definite precedent for the years to come. The time during which the banquet may be held is definitely stipulated. There are no restrictions on the hour of day when the Freshmen can leave town. They may leave at any moment during the month and a half allowed them. The Sophomores are forbidden to create a disturbance in another town, and the exact meaning of "disturbance" and "town" is embodied in the rulings. An exact definition of what shall consist of a breaking up of the banquet is also given. The energies of the Sophomores will be directed toward retaining three or more officers of the Freshman Class. There will be no definite advantage gained in retaining from attendance at the banquet other members of the class. The rulings are simply and clearly expressed; there will be no excuse for breaking them by either Freshmen or Sophomores. The danger of an occurrence which would bring discredit upon the college and its students is minimized, and yet at the same time a premium is placed upon the vigilance of both Freshmen and Sophomores. Again the Senate has proved itself a wise deliberative body, worthy of the utmost respect and hearty support of the student body."

Apparently the premium on vigilance was not high enough or the Freshmen had successfully solved the problem of finding the unknown x for they found a way of getting their officers, who were known to the Sophomores, safely away and out of sight and reach of 1909.

On Thursday, May 9, the officers who were closely shadowed by Sophomores, entered their French section and were all in the recitation room at 9.15. A little later a covered express wagon of the Horticultural Department backed up to the door, the officers jumped in, and with the horses on the run were hurried to Northampton road where they took the car for "Hamp." From here they went to Springfield, thence to Westfield and Pittsfield. From the latter city they went to North Adams where they were met by some other 1910 men and rushed to "The Wilson" where a banquet was held that night.

The other remaining members of the class left Amherst in two divisions, one going to Sunderland and walking across the river to Deerfield and here taking a special car to North Adams, while the other division went by way of Northampton and Greenfield.

During the evening 15 or 20 Sophomores landed in the town (arriving mostly by freight), but their attempts to "start something" were frustrated thru the aid of policeman McKane. Just after the class sat down at 8.45 the entrance of a few eggs thru the windows caused a little excitement but the disturbance soon died down and the Freshmen enjoyed their successful banquet in peace.

In connection with the banquet season in 1908 we get a side light on another of our college customs, the rope pull, which at this time came in the spring. In the records for April 19, 1908, the first motion reads as follows:

"Motion made and seconded that rope pull shall not take place before Thursday night provided the Freshman banquet does not come before the same time. Carried."

At this same meeting the next official change or step in the growth of the banquet rules appears on record:

"Motion made and seconded that Freshman class give a sealed list of names of their class officers to President of the Senate, to be opened in presence of Senate afterwards. This list must be handed in before April 19 of their Freshman year. Carried."

P. J. ALGER, Sec'y.

The Freshman class had already openly elected their officers and these had been captured by the Sophomores, but the Signal for this period gives it best:—

"One of the cleverest bits of strategy that has ever been accomplished about here was done by the Freshman during the week of April 19th. After the Amherst game the wily Sophomores captured the Freshman class president and officers, in order to break up the banquet which they thought was coming during the week. This done, they deemed it also wise to challenge the Freshmen to a rope pull contest on the following Monday. The Junior class, however, by virtue of their position as upper classmen, carried the matter to the Senate. The Senate ruled the challenge to be illegal provided the banquet was not held before the Thursday of that week. This ruling was necessary, that the Juniors might have a class day. But the Sophomores did not feel the justice of the decree, so they challenged the next day again. We need not draw conclusions here, but the strategic movement was evident to all. Of course the challenge was accepted, and the Freshmen had put their heads into a noose. But just here was where the Sophomores were completely outclassed by the superiority of the Freshman wit. A large demonstration by the Freshmen frightened away the Sophomores and caused the removal of the captives to a more secure place of concealment. Someone, however, blundered, and so enabled the Freshmen scouts to very easily follow the Sophomores. Deeming four men a sufficient number to guard the Freshman officers, the Sophomores set out to carry the first part of their plan through successfully. Unfortunately they did not succeed and were badly beaten, the Freshmen walking away finally with the rope. Immediately after the usual celebration the Freshmen left town in a body to capture their president. Skillfully led on by their scouts they located the spot where the captives were held and besieged it. Once more the Sophomores took flight and were followed and compelled to surrender their prisoners under threats of complete annihilation. What was seemingly a glorious victory for the Sophomores was doubly turned into an ignominious defeat. The Freshmen marched away to Holyoke where with cheers for 1911 and 1909 they departed for Hartford. Here in spite of the great number of difficulties that presented themselves they secured a Hotel and had menus printed for a banquet that evening.

"At eight o'clock, April 22d, the class sat down to their banquet at the New Dom Hotel."

In 1909 no changes in rules are recorded. The Freshman class used the "side door Pullman" method of escape, entering a freight car near Clark Hall, and were carried direct to the B. & M. Station just in time to get the special car which had been provided for them on the 3.19 Boston train. The class was joined in Boston by their officers who has been absent from Amherst a week (a condition which is impossible under present banquet rules) and at 8.15 on April 23 the class of 1912, with 71 members present, sat down to their banquet at the American House.

1910 Banquet Rules

"The Freshman class banquet shall be held on or between April 19 and June 1. The Sophomores shall create no disturbance in another town, while trying to break up the banquet. A breach of peace shall be considered a disturbance. If the Sophomores prevent the Freshman class president or any other three class officers from attending the banquet, it shall not be considered successful.

"The Freshman class must give a sealed list of the names of their class officers to the President of the Senate to be opened in the presence of the Senate. This list must be handed in before April 19."

Under the foregoing rules on April 21, 1910, the class of 1913 held their banquet at the Hotel Warren in Worcester at 8 P. M. By leaving Amherst at 3 A. M. and walking to South Amherst they boarded the 6.08 train and went to Worcester direct with no "Sophomoric" interference since this class had decided, after keeping a careful watch until 1 A. M., that there was "nothing doing" and at the time the Freshmen were "silently creeping away" the 1912 men were soundly sleeping.

That afternoon, at the Worcester station, the only class encounter of the season occurred when several Sophomores attempted to show a Freshman the errors of his ways and succeeded in manhandling him pretty thoroughly.

"Kid" Gore's name appears in the list of officers and it is said that at the banquet most of the 1913 class "Pep" originated—at any rate only 10 out of the class of 122 were absent.

1911

Senate Record of Feb. 22, 1911, printed in Signal, Mar. 21, 1911:

1. The banquet shall be held between the first Friday of May and the second Monday thereafter, inclusive.
2. Ninety per cent. of each class, including Freshman officers, must be present at chapel on the morning of the opening of the season. No Freshman shall be prevented from attending chapel on the first morning of the season.

3. The Freshman class shall give a sealed list of names of their class officers to the President of the Senate to be opened in the presence of Senate after the banquet season. This list must be handed to the President before April 19.

4. The banquet shall not be a success if the Sophomores succeed in detaining the class president or any three other class officers, including the chairman of the banquet committee as an officer in this connection, or if 50% of the Freshman class is not present at the banquet.

5. There shall be no breach of peace outside of town limits by either class. The use of firearms is considered as a breach of peace.

6. Infringement of these rules by either class constitutes a victory for the other class.

These rules were the result of an investigation and report of a committee for banquet rules and embody several new ideas which are still kept in the rules. The shortening of the season from almost two months to a little under two weeks is the most important of the changes, but attendance at chapel on the morning of the season's opening is another which has worked out well and been retained, in varied forms, to the present time.

Up to this time it had only been the officers who counted in attendance at the banquet but here we have a clause calling for at least one-half the class to be present, and last, but not least, the statement that violation of these rules by a class, forfeits the banquet,—a rule which has never yet been put into force.

The banquet held under these rules was a success in all ways. After a series of short brushes between the two lower classes Thursday night and Friday morning the Freshmen, about noon, cut across lots to the C. V. tracks, flagged the noon train, and when met by the Sophomores at the Amherst station they were safely inside the cars and were not seriously molested. The banquet was held at the American House, Boston, with the officers and more than 100 members present.

Though eluded, the Sophomores showed that they had inventive minds to say the least. A careful reading of Rule 2 will show that no definite chapel is mentioned, it being taken for granted that the college chapel was meant. Taking a literal translation of the rule, however, the Sophomores found room for doubt so that three Freshmen who had been spirited away the night before were allowed the privilege of attending chapel at a school twenty-five miles from Amherst in company with their captors.

This little affair caused much discussion and as a result we find on the Senate Records for April 9, 1912: "Rules Nos. 1 and 4 to be the same as in 1911, but No. 2 to read 90% of each class, including Freshman officers, must be present at the Mass. Agri. College Chapel exercises on the morning of the opening of the banquet season and must be in their regular seats and the Freshman class must answer to the roll as called by the Senate. No Freshman shall be prevented from attending said chapel exercises on the first morning of said season".

No. 3 was also slightly changed to read as follows: "The Freshman class shall give a sealed list of the full names of all Freshman class officers, each with his respective office designated, to the President of the Senate to be opened in the presence of the Senate after the close of the banquet season. This list must be handed to the President before April 19".

No. 5 remained the same but No. 6 had added to it: "and any one of these rules".

On Friday morning, May 3, 1912, the Freshmen (1915) put over a class get away which is remembered as the boldest and cleverest opening of a banquet season yet enacted.

Leaving the Chapel in a body the class, with the officers in the center, started for the center of the town, opposed all the way by the Sophomores, so that the affair took on the aspect of a running fight.

Students who are accustomed to going to the Post Office frequently are probably aware of the short cut thru the alley way which goes down beside Strong's Bakery and comes out a little above the Post Office. It was this alley which proved the undoing of the Sophomores. While the Freshmen kept up a firm front at the head of the alleyway their officers quietly slipped out and soon were speeding away in an automobile which had been waiting for them.

They reappeared safely the next night at the Woodland Park Hotel, Auburn-dale, and together with seven-eighths of the class sat down, victorious, to their banquet.

The year 1913 brings several radical changes in the Senate's Banquet rules, and incidentally places 1916 on record as the first losing class of Freshmen.

The running fight thru town in 1912 was considered a little too shocking to the sensitive nerves of the townspeople so that the rule calling for chapel attendance was dropped; it being hoped that this would prevent complete massing of the classes.

The season was also shortened again, running from 8 A. M. on the first Wednesday of May to the second Monday thereafter, inclusive. Also, for the first time, we have a banquet zone or reserve in which all Freshman officers had to be at the beginning of the season and could not leave until twenty-four hours before the banquet. To keep Freshmen from being forced out of the zone a clause forbidding this was put in and the statement that the banquet could not be held until the first Saturday of the season gave the Sophomores a definite time to work in within the zone. The rule on the zone reads: "The banquet reserve shall be bounded as follows: west, Connecticut River, north, Fitchburg division of B. & N. R. R., south, Central Mass. division of the B. & M. R. R.

Up to this time Freshman class officers for the banquet season had been secretly elected by a few, picked out by the president, or selected by a committee for that purpose so that oftentimes classes did not know whether their officers were with them or not until told by the election committee. In these rules, however, directions for electing officers are carefully laid down:

"Election of Freshman class officers shall be in open class meeting. All present at the meeting must know the officers elected before leaving the meeting in which the ballot is taken. Ninety per cent. of the class must be at this meeting."

After all the labor that went into these carefully made rules, it seems too bad that they were not really needed as there was very little excitement in the banquet reserve, the siege of a house on Hallock street being the only real disturbance on Saturday or Sunday.

Although there was not much excitement in Amherst there was one well directed swoop on the part of the Sophomores,—a little seance in a street in Brookline, a short auto journey and the Freshman president was safely in captivity in South

Framingham. Being of a generous frame of mind the Sophomores took their unwilling captive by electric to Worcester and then treated him to a train ride to Amherst where he rested secure if not content while his classmates waited in vain in faraway Boston for their worthy president to appear to make the banquet a success. His absence, however, was just enough to lose them the banquet so that on May 5, 1913, at the Exchange Club in Boston and at 7 o'clock sharp in the evening the class of 1916 ate the first unsuccessful banquet under Senate rules.

"Misery loves company"—that is one excuse, or we might begin. "Not to be outdone"; but to give credit where at least a little credit is due we will say: "After being 'done' by 1916 the class of 1917 held the second losing banquet on the afternoon of Monday, May 4th at the Hotel Bond in Hartford."

The rules of this season were little different from those of the preceding year, the principal changes being the cutting down of the reserve to the section bounded by the Connecticut River, Sunderland to Deerfield road, Sunderland Street Railway line to Amherst and the Valley electric line from Amherst to the Connecticut River—this section to be enlarged by the addition of the triangular piece of land included between Lover's Lane, East Pleasant Street and Pleasant Street. Another change was in the time of the season, the rule reading "From 6 P. M. on the first Monday in May to the second Friday in May, inclusive".

AN OFFICE OF SEVERAL BOSSES

Our, the Freshman, class officers were elected in an open meeting one cloudy night while our friends the Sophomores were enjoying themselves at a little entertainment in the drill hall. Though they became anxious about the absence of "Freshies" in any number they had no inkling of what was in the wind until we, as a class, marched down to the drill hall and proceeded to enjoy the remainder of the entertainment. From that time until the beginning of the banquet season there was a great deal of "private investigation" (Sophomores secreted under beds and in closets) at the various Freshman's houses, but so well were the names of the officers kept that none, or at least very, very few outside the class knew who they were until after the season was well under way.

The class was divided into squads of about ten men each, under a leader, and it was the duty of the leader to see that his men got safely away. Various methods were used but the main point of union was on the B. & M. tracks where a special train was to pick up the class at 2 A. M. Monday morning and carry us safely through Amherst to Northampton, then down through Springfield to Hartford, Conn. The train was hired, the officers were put away in hiding and things went along very well until the train reached Hadley on the way back to Northampton with the class on board. Here, when we opened the converted freight car to take out our officers and carry them away with us we found to our dismay, anger and various other sensations that our officers were gone—abducted by 1916 men. And right here is where 1917 earned the reputation of running the most expensive banquet on record. Automobiles scoured the country high and low but the officers were not located and the train drew out of Hadley and headed for Hartford where the class spent most of the day "seeing the sights".

Hadley, in 1906, was the scene of one "banquet scrap" and in this year was destined to see another one and one much lustier for its eight years growth.

When the banquet was well under way, early in the evening, a call came for twenty "roughnecks" to return to Hadley and attempt to rescue the officers. By train to Springfield and by auto from there to Hadley in a pouring rain shows the method by which they made the trip. The officers were being held prisoners in the upper room of a shed in Hadley and this, naturally, was the center of attack. Just what happened none can say definitely as the light was one of the first things to go out, but we do know that the affair was interesting enough to have the fire department called out and it was only after a line of hose had been laid and a stream played on the scrapping '16 and '17 men that the melee subsided and affairs straightened out. Just what the chances were of getting our officers we will not say as we might be called boasting but the final result was a calling off of the season and the leaving of the decision of the banquet to the Senate. This body decided in favor of '16 and 1917 went on record as the second class—and that consecutively—to lose its Freshman banquet. Of the class officers, five were captured in the freight car. One of them, the class captain, escaped—handcuffs and all—by jumping through a window and made his way to Hartford, but too late for the banquet. Just where the "bracelets" came from we do not know but they were of such an antique pattern that it was necessary to get a key from the old collection at police headquarters in Springfield in order to free him.

The only other officer present, the historian, succeeded in so completely fooling the Sophomores that even they still tell of sitting out under his window and shivering in the cold of the early morning while he had gone out under their noses, early in the evening, dressed as a lady and, leaning back comfortably in his borrowed plumage, had ridden safely away in an automobile, leaving only an empty room for the waiting Sophomores.

If reckless spending of money marked the banquet season in 1914, the opposite was true in 1915 as the result of new rules laid down by the Senate to insure a less expensive celebration. The time of the season was again slightly shortened, Rule 1 reading:

"The banquet season shall open at 3.00 P. M. on the first Saturday in May and shall continue to the following Monday at midnight."

This in itself would have lessened expenses, but Rules 7 and 9 made the spending of much money an impossibility. Rule 7 reads:

"The banquet must be held on Monday, May 3, not before 6 P. M. and within 35 miles of Amherst by rail."

Although this limitation on the distance from Amherst of holding the banquet and the time of holding it lessened the chances of the Freshmen, it was more than offset by Rule 9, reading:—

"No member of either class shall use any automobile, motorcycle, bicycle, horse or street car after the special mass meeting Saturday, May 1, until twelve hours before the banquet, and then such use will be allowed only outside the detention zone."

As Sophomore activities were confined by rule to the banquet zone which was the same as the year before, the use of a good pair of legs was the only method of propelling allowed throughout the season.

Of the other rules, there were no changes worthy of note, those of the previous year proving satisfactory with the exception of a special mass meeting (7) which was called on Saturday morning instead of coming at a regular chapel time as in former seasons.

Banquet season excitement began long before the season itself and showed up for the first time when the Freshmen class meeting at which the officers were announced was interrupted by a delegation of interested Sophomores. The Freshmen plans had been laid so well, however, that the interruption made no difference either way as all announcements of election results were made in code. Previous to spring vacation, nominations for officers had been made and ballots printed. These were distributed, by mail mostly, during the vacation and the result announced at the above-mentioned class meeting in a combination code familiar only to Freshmen so that if Mr. "A" was announced as President and Mr. "IOU" for Treasurer, only Freshmen knew the winning candidate.

Directly after the special Saturday morning chapel, at which the Sophomores were kept one-half hour longer than the Freshmen, 1918 put several of their officers into a wagon and covered them over with blankets to keep their identity secret and "drove off"—with students as "horse power". These officers were secreted in Mr. Gaskill's house, toward North Amherst, and though several Freshmen were taken from this house by 1917 men, the officers were not molested and the President with two others left the house dressed as "young ladies" the following Monday and after crossing the car track were out of the zone and then enjoyed an auto ride to the scene of the banquet, keeping to the back roads and coming into Greenfield from above.

The other officers—several of whom were on the baseball squad at Williston—were to spend their time at Graves' in Sunderland where they were to go after the game. In these arrangements there was a little hitch as two families in Sunderland answer to the name of Graves and the officers got the wrong house. However, when they landed in the wrong one they made it a right one and stayed there until taken away Monday in automobiles which waited right across the car track outside the zone.

Of the two other officers the Vice-President was captured in the "right" Graves' house, while the second, after finding both "Graves' " surrounded by '17 men managed to get lodging at another house and soon after daybreak Monday he was headed toward the boundary line which he crossed on the Sunderland side and headed for Greenfield.

The main body of the class had left town as soon as the season began and had spent the time in various places till Monday, when all of them headed for Greenfield also where the banquet was held that evening, May 3, at the Mansion House.

Before the banquet was over, all the officers and all but two of the class members were present, one officer and a dozen others being released by '17 early in the evening when it was found that not enough men or officers had been captured to make the banquet a failure.

In the last year or two, especially since the expensive affair of 1914, much has been said about discontinuing the banquet season, the reasons being the saving in time and money. To be sure, the time used for the banquet season might well be used to good advantage on studies and the money spent might go to pay up back board at the dining hall, but the fact remains that in no other activity,—athletic, social, or scholastic—does the freshman class as a class gain a stronger union, develop more class spirit, or become a stronger unit of the college of which they are a part. The banquet season is the solidifying factor of the freshman year. Previously demoralized classes come out of the banquet season united as one man and able as a whole, to do their best in furthering the affairs of their own class and the college.

The banquet is a landmark around which all other affairs seem to hinge. In the past they have been bad, they have been good, they have been fair, but whatever dissatisfaction has been caused or whatever damage done through misapplied class rivalry it is to be hoped that from now on, even as in the years past, each freshman class in the spring of the year may have the opportunity of gaining class solidarity, spirit and "pep" in the continuation of the

LUCKY PLAY LOSES GAME FOR AGGIES

Fact of the matter is that Dr. Arthur Brides, All-Tale star, has a very wonderful small college eleven at M. A. C. If you don't believe it, and you just Saturday, take a look at comparative scores of last Saturday and of Saturday the week before.

Dartmouth had a very tough time beating the Aggies a week before the Farmers met Harvard. In fact, Dartmouth was about as lucky as Harvard to win over the Aggies. Both "varsity" players were lucky to escape 0-0 deadlocks.

offense. After watching the Aggies get down the field under punts Saturday, one is inclined to the opinion that the defensive part of the game will not be exactly ignored at Cambridge this week. Emory Greyson, left end for the Aggies, was down under everything, in on about every play from scrimmage and looks like a real player, who might be mentioned on some of the honor eleven along in late November or December if he only were fortunate enough to play on a big "varsity" team instead of an one which represents a college of only 700 students.

FARMERS USED NOTHING BUT MINNESOTA SHIFT

The Aggies worked their shift as well as anything there has been here heretofore in years. The fact that this shift depends on precision and speed to be effective and the fact that this shift made it almost impossible to prevent the Farmers from making the plays perfectly. Harvard was handicapped by the wet team players have been learning during the football. They knew that the Farmers would work the Minnesota shift smoothly enough to win the game. But were frequently forced to withstand the onside kick this way or that, or up-inward, but the Farmers were able to win the game as a statement of fact. The Aggies have a "wheel shift, an AMHERST, Oct. 9.—Playing the same aggressive brand of football showed last week at Harvard, Mr. Massachusetts Agricultural College today dedicated its "new alumni" athletic field by winning a 26 to 0 victory over Colby, Lithuania.

AGGIES SHOWED BETTER STUFF THAN HARVARD

One would expect that the Aggies would show better football than Harvard, but the fact that the Aggies have a "varsity" teambook in the last-handed through-out the game of the Farmers, George Palmer, the make a little which cost the team the honor of a 60-0 score game against Harvard.

Not one substitute did the Aggies use Saturday in 30 minutes of play. On such a day this is a remarkable record of physical fitness. The physical director of the team from Amherst is Curry Kicks from the Michigan Agricultural College.

While at Yale, Brides played about every position on the team, but one. He is a one-man coach and his shifting about of Yale's own Yale had a highly efficient corps of coaches seem to do so well in football. Grinnell, other grumpy how these coaches who've made good are Dr. G. C. Hull at Dartmouth, Dr. Whelan at Dartmouth, Dr. Hull at Yale and Dr. Cahill at Worcester Academy.

Football Season of 1915

The football eleven never opened its season with better promise of success than it did this year. Only two new places were left to be filled, but a few changes had to be made, because of the graduation of a quarterback, full-back, and center. Five games have already been played, and although the schedule is the hardest an Aggie team has ever faced, the results thus far show her an even break in games played and far ahead in points scored. Probably the most satisfactory result, as far as students and alumni are concerned, was that of the Harvard game. Altho the score was 7-0 against us, Aggie really outplayed her opponents, and a fluke play in the last two minutes gave the game to Harvard. The creditable showing in this game, as well as in all the others that have been played, has been due to the excellent work of Coach Brides, who signed a one-year agreement after his three-year contract had expired. His system and personality have succeeded in a fair way, but in no such way as they deserve, and our best hope for next season's team, is that "Doc" will be here to show us how.

Baseball Season of 1915

The season of 1915 was started with little baseball material, a condition heretofore almost unknown and hence the showing of seven wins and eight losses was not up to the usual standard of "Aggie Quality". "Billy" Fitzmaurice is to be with us again this year, and given material with which to work, will develop a team for the coming season which will uphold the good reputation made by former teams at M. A. C. We have lost but two men, including Captain Johnson from the pitching staff, and although handicapped by his loss, it is the hope of all loyal Aggie supporters that a winning combination may be developed from the men still left in college. The football team has well made history with a victory in the first game on the new athletic field, and so the baseball team bids fair to have history repeat itself when it plays Dartmouth for the first home game of the season.

Hockey Season of 1915

The hockey season of 1914-15 was played under very unfavorable conditions, but in spite of warm weather, poor ice, the lack of a coach and a poor rink, the team finished a very satisfactory season. Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Princeton and Columbia were among the teams met and in every case the reputation of M. A. C. was upheld. On paper the past season would seem to the outsider to be somewhat of a failure. But to the close follower of the game who considers the teams played and the comparative lack of material, there is not a doubt that the team was equal to any collegiate hockey team in the country. This year there is hope for even a better team. Plans for a coach are already under way and the rink will undoubtedly be improved. Only two men, Archibald and Johnson, have been lost by graduation, but it will be hard to fill the places of these players. A well balanced team with a clear slate is the aim of the team this year.

The Track Season of 1914-1915

In the winter of 1914-15 the relay team again had the services of Coach Dickinson. Matches were arranged with Tufts, W. P. I., Bowdoin, and Rhode Island
State and were run off at the various Armory games. Prospects were very bright, when the season opened with a victory over Tufts in the best race of the Coast Artillery games. Russell '16, Mostrom '16, Sturtevant '17, Pratt '17, Babbitt '18, and Bishop '15 were used in the various races and made a creditable showing.

In the spring season meet against W. P. I., the lack of men in the field events gave Aggie a bad handicap and Worcester opened her new field with a victory.
At the Tufts meet in Medford the team was better balanced and Tufts barely won by the margin of two points. At the intercollegiates, M. A. C. took her first point when Richards '16 beat out a large field and finished fourth in the two mile run.
The time of this race was very fast and failed to equal the record of 9 minutes,
35 3-5 seconds by only 1-5 of a second.

Cross Country

The fall of 1914 saw M. A. C. with the best cross country team the college ever had. A new course over "Prexy's" hill and east toward the rifle range and back gave the men a very hard race with Worcester Polytechnic Institute. The fast Worcester men found their match when Richards, Aiken, and Coley finished before their best man was over the line.
At the New England Inter-Collegiate meet, the showing was very creditable,
Richard finished sixth and Aiken eighth.
Maine, M. I. T., Dartmouth, were the only teams to beat us and Aggie in fourth place can feel proud over the defeat of Amherst, Brown, Williams, W. P. I.,
Colby, and Bowdoin.

Ode to Kenney

My purse is flat and limp and weary,
My thoughts are sometimes dark and dreary
When Shylock mails his little dun,
Fond recollections o'er me come.
I think of father's old bank-books,
And wonder how real money looks.
I think of days when I was young,
And spent Dad's dollars—one by one—
And now, by heck, I'm far away,
My money's gone—there's hell to pay.
My summer's wages—long since spent—
And Kenney must know where they went.
I worked my stint in sun and shower
For only fifteen cents an hour.
I work, but little can I earn,
And so the midnight oil I cease to burn.
These luxuries cost too much,
And frankly, now I am "in Dutch."
I've flunked my physics and my trig.,
My English sure "is on the pig."
And Gordon's Zoo., I must confess,
Has put me in an awful mess.
Sid. Haskell's "Ag." is just like mud,
And how to fertilize a spud,
About the subject I don't know,
As much now as two years ago,
When in the field I worked all day,
Hoeing spuds and pitching hay.
And now my little tale is o'er,
I'll soon be leaving by the door
That leads back to the farm and ease,
And I'll go back to raising peas.
And Kenney's bills won't bother me,
No more Old Shylock's duns I'll sec.
On buckwheat and sausage too,
I'll live as only farmers do.
But when each year rolls round September,
Then will I surely this remember:
No longer I'm in Shylock's clutch,
No longer am I now in Dutch,
For when my hard day's work is done,
I'll count my thousands, one by one.

Woe! Woe! Woe!

And it came to pass in the days of good king Lefty that a great thirst spread thru all the land. Woe! to the Aggie-ites. Woe! to the Amherst-ites. There was smotting and belting of eyebrows and a great famine was thru-out all the land. Now on the 24th day of the 5th month a servant of the High King set himself out to discover a new oasis. After wandering for many moons and yea even many suns, he came to a place called the Elmwood. Being sore tired he entered. But he found too many that came before him and he returned sore vexed.

OUR IDEA OF A GOOD TIME

The king then did call his wise-guys around him and told them of the calamity. And one being wiser than the rest did know a land where the peoples did labor on paper. The king entrusted this wise one with 59 eggshells of the Royal Exchequer to go in search of this wonderful land. The wise-guy went and stayed three days and even three nights in this new place. The king was sore worried at this delay, but on the evening of the third day the wise one returneth and spake in awed tones of this great land. The king did go then himself and returned on the 5th night. Then the people did know that the land of plenty had been found and great was the rejoicing thru-out all the land.

When the Women Vote

Smashing the Smith line and racing around the Smith ends, the Wellesley warriors sent the Northampton team down to defeat on Smith field Saturday by a score of 14-0, etc.

The Wellesley captain won the toss and chose the north goal with the sun at her back. Smith ran the ball back to her own 40 yard line. Here a fumble took place and the Boston team by terrific line plunging carried the ball over for the initial tally. Capt. Livermore kicked the goal. The second touch-down came in the third period as the result of a series of long end runs and a lateral pass. The goal was kicked—again.

Tea was served at Rahar's to the visitors after the game.

The Modern Nobel

Poor Cuthbert decided to end it all. Lor had trun him o'er. Picking out a quiet spot on a Lynn ferryboat he shed his fuzzy vest and Walk Over "hoofs" (not an add). Surveying the briny for a soft resting place, he prepared for his last "annual". Just then who should appear but Terresa, the Herring King's daughter. She lamped the H₂O in his soufull globes and divining his sad thoughts, offered him three Packards and a Ford tender to reconsider and be her'n. Cuthbert told her to call at his office for the final answer. The following Monday they bought a little delicatessan in Chelsea and lived happily ever after.

My Cot at Aggie

My cot over there in the corner,
To this room is a meager adorer,
With dimensions only six by three,
Some people can not really see
How you're of any use to me.

Thy springs are stretched,
Thy bars are bent,
Thy castors all are lost:
Yet still withstand the rack and wrench,
Of flopping down without remorse.

Behind the Bars

When I've studied long and late,
On finals or on Wordsworth's lore,
With thee I can relax complete—
Thou carest not how much I snore.
No four-post high-bed tempts me now—
In your old pillow, I sink my prow.

You good old bed, you ne'er complain
If I till ten in bed remain,
Were other pleasures gone from me,
I would not care a mite—
I'd only ask beseechingly
To roll up in thy blankets tight.

“Miss Goessmann—Have studied music for some years and this little poem was thought up after I heard a superb recital by Paderewski”—but why go on with the harrowing tale?

TABBY was a chemist, Tabby rode a wheel,
Now his Ingersoll has precipitated an automobile.

LITTLE Tommy Tucker howls for his supper,
What shall he eat? Prunes, beef, and butter.
How shall he cut it with a round-edged knife?
Why, tack it to the floor and gnaw there for life.

With someone else's daughter.
Jack looked down and grinned a frown,
For dragging was his—shoe string.

The clock struck one, and zoo's begun,
Darned old Chapel clock.

AS I went to Holyoke,
 I met a gink, with a whiskey stink.
 Holy jumping pussies.

NEEDLES and pins, needles and pins,
 Sew up the hole before pneumonia begins.

HEY, diddle diddle, a horn and a fiddle,
 At last the Informal's begun,
 The thugs in the gallery indulge in raillery
 To help along the fun.

EARL—"Granted that barren stalks are the direct result of poor seed, what would you suggest as a remedy?"

PEARL—"Do not select seed from barren stalks".

EARL—"Admitting that rhizoctonia developes in the tubers, how does it get up in the vines?"

NIEMAND-ZU-HAUSE—"Gallumps up the stalk on shank's eggs or hires Sherin-yan to take it up in a gazzump."

EARL—"Pop corn is said to be the father of all corn."

To Holyoke, to Holyoke, to buy a gin fizz,
 Home again, home again, dancing a jig,
 Ride to Holyoke to buy brandy grog,
 Home again, home again, jiggety-jog,
 To Holyoke, to Holyoke, to buy a plum duff,
 Home again, home again, Lord knows it's enough.

Toasts

"Here's to the lasses we've loved, my lad;
Here's to the lips we've pressed,
For of kisses and lasses,
Like liquor in glasses,
The last is always the best".

—HALLETT

"Too much work and no vacation
Justifies a slight libation,
Here's a toast, boys, raise your glasses
Work is the curse of the drinking classes".

—DICKIE RAHAR

"Fairest of creatures, last and best."

—WILBER

"Men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them—but not for love."

—EVERBECK

"He said when first he saw me
Life seemed at once divine,
Each night he dreamed of angels,
And each face was mine,
Sometimes a voice in sleeping
Would all his hopes forbid,
And then he'd waken weeping—
Do you really think he did?"

—HIGGINBOTHAM

"Here's to the land we love, and the love
we land".

—HILL

Here's to the wings
of love,
May they never
molt a feather
Till your little shoes
and my big boots,
Are under the bed
together."

Billy's Last Word

After Browning's "A Woman's Last Word" with apologies to Browning, but not to Billy.

You really don't know
sir
Much about
What you'd try to show, sir,
Rub it out!

IV

Of your demonstration
(Awful poor)
And your explanation—
Are you sure?

(Hear the creature talking
Right along,
Suavely without balking)—
Well—yer wrong!

"The pathos of Glory lead but to the Grave"
Ashes to ashes; dust to dust—
If 'lefty' don't get us,
Billy must.

Had you only ground, sir,
As you ought,
You would not expound, sir,
Such poor rot.

Sir, you're full as stupid
As a clown,
And you've hit the greased
skid—
Going down!

Need proceed no more, sir,
Thus in doubt,
Just give up the floor, sir,
Rub it out!

Authoritative statements of great import gleaned from Assembly:

The Sophomore President—"I think that I voice the sentiment of the Class when I say that we wish the Banquet Season to be continued."

The Freshman President—"I think that I voice the sentiment of the Class when I say that we wish the Banquet Season to be continued."

Voice on the heels of the storm—"Second the motion!"

The INDEX Board wishes to acknowledge receipt of the following communication:

“The 1917 INDEX board:
Married at Odessa, Missouri,

Henry T Cowles, 1910
and Miss Emma Jones”.

We are always glad to hear from the alumni, especially the younger ones, and to know that they are getting along in their efforts to “Boost Old Aggie”. At the same time, we are of the private opinion that this was in the wrong stall, when it appeared in our letter box.

First Impressions of a Freshman as Gleaned from a Lost Note-Book:

"Dear ? :

"Great life. First of all, I must tell you about the hazing. We have to jump over all the numerals, salute Profs. and Seniors, enforced by Sophs. and believe me they are wise. This noon I went swimming, but I didn't enjoy it because I had a headache, something very unusual, I think it was the food at the "hash" house, but I'm feeling better to-night. It is about 90 in the shade and varsity football team is playing, and believe me they are sore. I would have written before, but I put your address amongst my stationery and put that in my trunk which came a day late. But please excuse me. Will you? The scenery is beautiful and I just love it.

"Now, Helen, my mail will be O. K. because I spoke to my landlady and she said she would look after it. Our freshman class is very large, about 220 students. To-night we are going to have a secret rope-pulling practice, after dark, supposed to be unknown to the sophs. I am not going to play football, but I am going to play baseball in a series against the sophs. My room-mate is a peach of a fellow, very quiet, studious, and seems to be very pleasant. My room is very pleasant also 3 large windows and 2 large beds.

"I don't like to talk about your principles, but really and truly think they are O. K. I am going to adopt the same principles, because I think I ought to for your sake or because you are observing them. Don't you believe it a good idea? My mother thanks you very much for remembering her, she is all broke up, especially now that both Carl and I have gone. Last night Karl and I played at our house and had a very pleasant evening.

"Now, Helen, dear, and I mean it, suppose I wait for my regular Wed. mail written by you, and I will receive it about Sat. A. M. and answer it Sat. P. M., late. Will that be all write? It is getting time to beat it because the sophs are gathering for supper, I am writing this letter in a summer house near the dining hall. Give my regards to the girls, please, goodbye.

"Yours most sincerely,

1919."

We're all in the dumps,
 For Billy is trumps.
 The results are on the Dean's board!
 The sophs. are bit,
 The frosh in a fit,
 For Billy, the Czar, is a lord.

LESS NOISE, SHORTHORN!

PREPARING FOR PHYSICS

How Paul Really Did It

It was a moonlight night

“On the 18th. of April in '75,
Scarcely a man is now alive.”

The telephone rang. Leisuredly laying down his copy of “Snappy Stories”, Paul Revere strolled towards it, blinked, scratched his head, and stopped.

“Oh, the devil! If that’s for me, it will ring again”. He continued reading — “The girl was now absolutely at loss. Her pink chiffon, trimmed with filly de poo poo, was all wine stained, and really her chapeau was a mess. No, the Follies of 1775 were out of the question for that night and —”

The bell rang again. This time, Paul slammed down the book with an angry exclamation. In one stride, he gained the phone:

“Hello! What the h—l do you want?”

“Hello! Hello! Hello! Is this Revere’s house?——”

“Yes, what do you want?”

“Hello! Is this Boston 6665-M?”

“No. That’s my motor-cycle license.”

“Hello! Is this Paul Revere?”

“Yes, what do you want?”

“Wait a minute, till I get a better connection.” A pause.

“Hello, hello! Is this you Paul?”

“Yes, who is this?”

“This is John Adams talking.”

“Hello, John, how are you?”

“Pretty good. How’s yourself, Paul?”

“None better. What’s the odds on Harvard to-morrow?”

“I don’t know, but I understand Mahan’s in again.”

“Say, John, didn’t I see you out with one of the Hancock girls to-day?”

“Yes. Why?”

“Never mind, I saw you crawling along Revere Beach with a pretty smooth dame yourself. Whence the damsel?”

“Oh, that was one of the nurses from the British Hospital ship. Pretty wise, John, says she’s been to England.”

“Say, Paul, are you going to the game to-morrow?”

“Sure. Stop in on your way by. Are you going to take the State limousine, or one of those jitneys?”

“I lent the limousine to Lord Howe to reconnoiter in and he found every crystal palace from Dorchester to Lynn, so I guess I’ll walk. Oh, by the way, Paul, that makes me think. I got pretty good dope on the British. They are all going out to Lexington to a dance to-night. Perhaps you'd better spread the alarm before all the girls are taken."

"Good idea, John, I'll do that."

"All right, don't forget. See you tomorrow."

"Sure. Good night."

They hang up. Paul quickly grabs his receiver from the hook again:

"Hello, Nellie. You on the board again to-night?"

"Sure." (Crunch, crunch—gummy sounds). "This you, Paul?"

"Yes, this is Paul. What are you doing tomorrow night?"

"What do you want, Paul—dear?" (Persuasive tone)

"What do you say to a little steak all alone at the Atlantic House?"

"Paul, you're a dear, I'll wear my new suit." (To clinch the argument).
"Good night, Paul."

"Good night, Nell." (Smack)

(Over the phone—smack!)

Paul sits down, holds his head in his hand for awhile, then steps to the call bell. Presently a servant enters. Paul arises and hands him a slip of paper.

"James, will you have three thousand of these printed up and distributed thru Greater Boston?"

"Going to run for Congress again, Mr. Revere, sir?"

"None of your business, James, get out."

The circulars were distributed and greatly resembled this:

MINUTE MEN TO ARMS

The British threaten to take all the girls of Lexington and Concord tomorrow night for their dance at Odd Fellows' Hall. To prevent such a catastrophe, all girls must be engaged for said evening, or their whereabouts ascertained. Waste no time. America expects every man to do his duty.

(Signed) The Vigilance Committee.

Per P. Revere, Sec.

And so the British were foiled.

In the meantime, Paul, after another cigarette and another whiskey and soda, finished his story and sought the downy white at an earlier hour than he had for many a week.

"And the people will wake and listen to hear

The midnight message of Paul Revere."

Massachusetts Agricultural

The Massachusetts Agricultural College is a public service institution, the function of which is to benefit the agriculture and rural life of the state and incidentally that of the nation.

In the fulfilment of its mission the College undertakes the work of Investigation, Resident Instruction and Extension Service.

INVESTIGATION follows three distinct lines: (1) scientific research, through which are discovered new laws governing the growth of plants and animals, (2) experimentation, which seeks to ascertain the best methods of applying science to practice, and (3) the agricultural survey or inventory of agricultural conditions and possibilities.

The purpose of INSTRUCTION given to resident students is to prepare them for the agricultural vocations and also to train them in the principles of good citizenship. Students pursuing the regular four years' course may specialize in any of the following named departments:

Agriculture	Landscape Gardening
Agronomy	Pomology
Animal Husbandry	Agricultural Chemistry
Dairying	Economic Entomology
Poultry Husbandry	Plant Physiology and Pathology
Floriculture	Microbiology
Forestry	Agricultural Education
Rural Social Science	Rural Journalism

Undergraduate courses are also offered in a large number of departments the work of which is not arranged as a "major."

The Graduate School admits college graduates for advanced study in agriculture, botany, chemistry, entomology, horticulture, mathematics, microbiology, veterinary science, zoology, and rural social science.

College, Amherst, Mass.

Various short courses and conferences are held at the college, among these being the following:

Winter School of Agriculture	Farmers' Week
Summer School of Agriculture	Boys' Camps
Conference for Rural Social Workers

The task of the EXTENSION SERVICE is to disseminate agricultural knowledge to all people of the state having rural interests, and to assume an attitude of leadership or of co-operation in various activities, educational, social or economic, which tend to benefit agriculture and country life. Thousands of persons are directly reached each year by the Extension Service. Some of the types of work organized by this branch of the College are:

Correspondence Courses in Agriculture	Boys' and Girls' Clubs
Itinerant Schools of Agriculture	Traveling Libraries
Educational Exhibits	District Field Agencies
Demonstration Orchards	Lecture Courses

Five Facts of Interest about the Massachusetts Agricultural College

1. It trains men for vocations not yet overcrowded.
 2. It offers courses of study in 28 departments of academic instruction covering the fields of Agriculture, Horticulture, Sciences, Humanities, and Rural Social Science.
 3. Its enrollment of students of college grade exceeds 600 in number.
 4. Its field of service is the entire state.
 5. Its educational advantages are practically free.

XIV

Four crops of lettuce can be grown in a greenhouse in addition to at least two between-row crops.

If you are near a city, contract to furnish one of the hotels with out-of-season vegetables—that's the way this man does. He makes money.

Another Way You Can Make Money

WE take it your interests are Agricultural. That being so, then Dame Nature arbitrarily decrees the on and off months for production.

But why have any off months, when with one of our greenhouses you can turn every off month into a good paying on one; besides making the present on ones, pay still more.

In short, do more "mixed farming." Mix some of our kind of intensive with your kind of extensive.

For over half a century we have been building greenhouses. We can be a very ready help to you on the intensive side.

Let's talk it over, together. Our Handy Hand Book you are welcome to.
